SHOCK AND AWWE!

Now that's roadkill!

Why did the South African antelope cross the road? To get to the other side — but these hungry cats had other ideas...

Two lions had an early dinner when they stumbled across a kudu in South Africa's Kruger National Park — giving motorists a ring-side seat to a brutal kill. The antelope stepped onto the road in view of the lions, and slipped when trying to escape. One pounced on its back, and the second went for its throat. "There was little struggle once the big lion had it," said Brit tourist Carolyn Dunford. They fed for 30 minutes then dragged the carcass away.

'day, Anika. What have you been up to since we saw you last?

I just finished my yoga teacher training in Melbourne and now I'm in Bali getting some summer lovin'.

How much fun did you have at the arcade shoot?

I thought it was such a great idea! Boogying around on the jet ski was definitely my favourite part. I was on crutches that week so I was hanging on for dear life [laughs].

Are you into gaming?

I'm more an outdoorsy kind of gal but sometimes I watch my friends play.

Would you ever play a strip video game — as in, play a game against a guy the same way people play strip poker?

I'm up for anything, so yes, but I would end up naked in a heartbeat [laughs].

We understand you've done nude modelling before... Where's the strangest place you've ever been nude?

In a beautiful cafe shooting for Playboy in Bali. It opened mid-shoot and all the staff and customers came flooding in. I was totally in my element so I didn't mind [laughs].

"WE WERE BORN NAKED SO STAY TO THAT. BE FREE, ENJOY YOUR BODY!"

Are you comfortable being in the nude?

Always. I love a statement! We were born naked so why not stay to that. Be free, enjoy your body!

Are you single? If so, are you looking for a bloke?

I have a boyfriend.

Bugger! What's your taste in men, anyway?

I like an action man.

Somebody that gets stuff done and has desires. Confident and expressive. I'm also kind of a sucker for computer geeks!

If a guy was lucky enough to get you into bed, what's one thing he absolutely must do?

He must be an amazing big spoon [laughs].

And what's one thing he absolutely must NOT do?

Check his phone. When I'm with somebody I think it's fair to be giving each other absolute attention. When somebody interrupts the moment with a Facebook check it's an automatic turn off!

Some models find that guys are intimidated by their looks and are scared to approach them. Has Sometimes. Everybody has their insecurities.

Do you ever take the initiative and try to pick up a guy?

If somebody feels nervous or intimidated I do my best to break the ice by making them laugh and feel included. Everybody deserves to feel at ease and confident.

Have you ever used a pick-up line? If so, what was it?

No, I have eyelashes!

What's one thing we should know about you that we don't?

I read at every chance, mostly natural health and personal wellbeing. I love teaching yoga, embracing different cultures, and practice meditation regularly. It brings me joy to watch people grow and learn about their health and happiness. I am a strong believer in beauty starting from the inside.

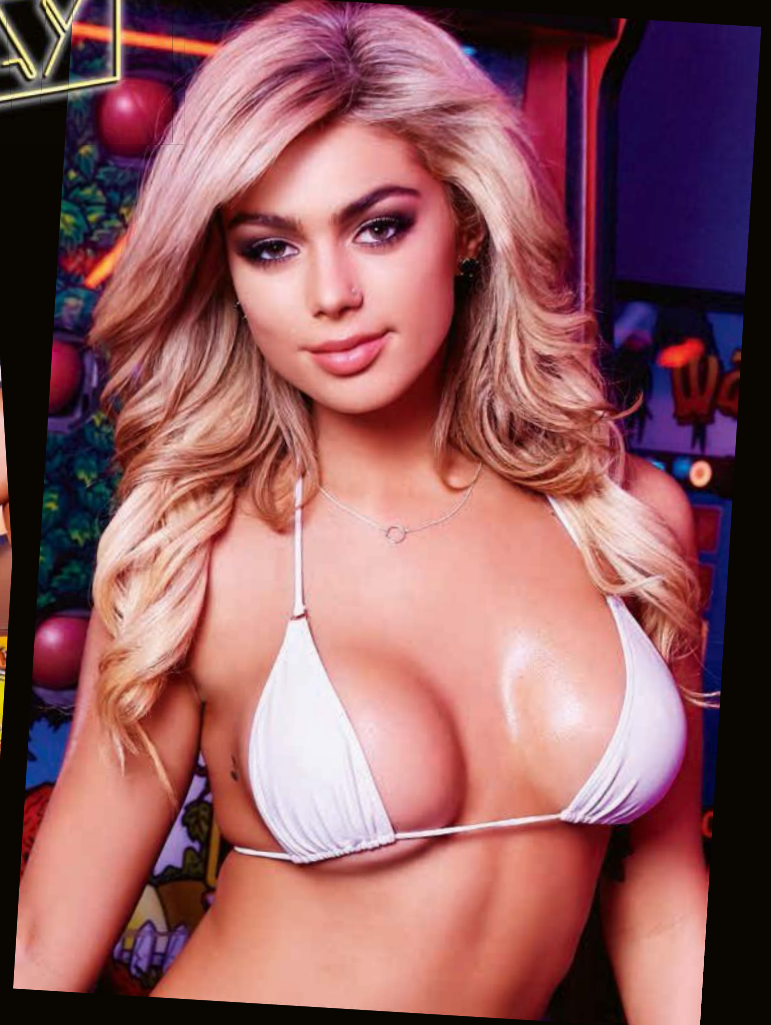

What's next for you?

In September I'm heading to India for a few months by myself to further my knowledge on yoga and broaden my horizons, and have crazy adventures!

Mick Fanning beats off shark!

Finally a shark attack story with a happy ending, as Aussie surfing legend somehow survives becoming shark shit...

GET THE APP!

In case you've been living under a rock (which would be much safer than in the water), you'd know Aussie triple world champion surfer Mick Fanning was attacked by a shark while competing against fellow Aussie Julian Wilson in the final of the J-Bay Open in South Africa.

In a scene that looked like it was straight out of Jaws, Fanning was minding his own business waiting for a wave when a monster from the deep surfaced and tried to make a meal of him — on live TV! There were reports of a second and possibly even a third shark being involved, however ZOO suspects they were just brown sharks that evacuated Fanning's bowel.

Proving he's got aggro the size of Uluru, Fanning landed punches on the feisty fish as it tore his leg rope in two and left him floundering in the open ocean as he waited for the safety boat, jet skis and/or death to arrive. Fortunately it was the former.

In another unbelievable showcase of true-blue Aussie heroism, Julian Wilson could be seen frantically paddling TOWARDS Mick and the shark, hoping to "stab it" with his board. Someone give these blokes a bravery medal!

The competition was cancelled and the surfing world breathed a collective sigh of relief that both of these legends survived the craziest event in the history of competitive surfing.

Bigger, hungrier and now ON LAND!

You're not even safe OUT of the water!

➔ If you thought only rad-dog surfers and swimmers were at risk of being munched by sharks, think again. Footage of a great white (pictured, middle right) launching itself onto the sand a couple of weeks ago in Cape Cod, US, suggests that sharks are now coordinating their attacks on land as well (we blame Sharknado for putting ideas in their heads). The snappy seven-foot "juvenile" was found stranded by beach goers, and in a rescue that bore striking similarities to Ron Burgundy's effort with Doby in Anchorman 2, they helped the beast back in the water — an idea that could literally end up biting them in the arse one day, especially if that same juvenile grows to the size of "Deep Blue" (pictured high-fiving a diver, above). The 20-foot-plus behemoth was spotted near Mexico's Guadalupe Island. At first divers mistook the 50-year-old noah for Kyle Sandilands on his morning swim, but soon realised it was something much less scary.

QUIZ

WILL YOU GET EATEN BY A SHARK?

Do you live in Alice Springs?

A: Yes, it's drier than a dead dingo's donger out here!
B: No, but I'd consider moving inland if it's less sharky.
C: Alice? Alice? Where the fk is Alice Springs?

Do you piss in your wetsuit?

A: Hell no, brah. That stank stuff rots your wettie!
B: Only if it's really, really cold.
C: All the time. I like to marinate in my own juices.

Would you beat off a shark if attacked?

A: Definitely. I would go Rocky Balboa on that flake's ass.
B: Only if it paid for dinner first.
C: No, I'm straight.

Do you ride a bodyboard?

A: No way, kook! Those dick draggers look like shark biscuits!
B: Only when no-one is looking.
C: Totally, bro. Stand out, not up!

RESULTS:

MOSTLY As: You should be safe... for now.

MOSTLY Bs: Maybe. You might want to reassess your life choices... while you have a life.

MOSTLY Cs: Definitely. If you're not already dead, you will be soon.

World's first ever BMX quad backflip

Kiwi BMX legend proves if at first you don't succeed, try, try, try (and keep going) again means a win in a friendly nine-month competition with US rider James Foster to conquer the acrobatic achievement. Milton's other BMX firsts include the initial triple backflip when he was working as a welder and sponsored by a local Macca's. Next stop: the quin flip? Go on, fella!

JOE: No, that would be very unprofessional.

INMATE: Alright, alright! Oh hey, check it out, man, when you were a cop did you ever, you know, use your handcuffs when you were getting kinky with your girl?

JOE: No, it's city property, so you're not really supposed to take those home.

INMATE: Oh, for sure, for sure. Oh, by the way, a bunch of us are going to kill you in the shower later.

PETER LOVES HIM SOME NASCAR

SANTA: Look, Rudolph, it's not me, alright. It's Dasher, he's been complaining and he is the one who has to look at it all night.

RUDOLPH: I don't know. Mrs Claus says it'll decrease my sensitivity.

SANTA: I... I'm sorry. Why are you talking to my wife about this?

GRIFFIN VS TIM ROBBINS

PETER [TO CLEVELAND AND JOE]: I mean, I haven't been this into something since The Shawshank Redemption.

PETER [TO A PANEL FEATURING MORGAN FREEMAN, TIM ROBBINS AND DIRECTOR FRANK DARABONT]: Yes, after you escaped into the hole, how did you perfectly reattach the Rita Hayworth poster from inside the hole with a tautness that a rock could pierce?

TIM ROBBINS: Does it really matter?

PETER: It does to me.

TIM ROBBINS: Did you even like the movie?

PETER: I did very much... up until that point.

Bike lock prank goes horribly RIGHT!

Fireys use angle grinder to free bloke after pissed mates lose the keys

 What are friends for? Definitely not this.

An unnamed Pommy man in his 20s woke up after a big night recently to find his mates had stuck a bike lock around his neck. He probably thought it was kind of funny... until he found out the bloody idiots had lost the key.

The poor bastard spent three hours trying to free himself before giving up and heading to his local fire station in Coventry with his mum to see if they could get it off. But the fireys' regular gear wasn't enough to get through the hardened steel, even though they used hydraulic cutters. They had to send for a technical rescue team, who brought an angle grinder usually used on train tracks to do the job.

"He just rang the bell and said 'my mates have put this on my neck and they couldn't get it off'," said firefighter Brin Mills, probably while trying not to piss himself laughing. "He was fine throughout — he could see the funny side, bless him."

Station commander Pete Drummond added, "His mother was not looking best pleased." It was probably her bike lock — and those things cost a lot of money.

Not even heavy duty hydraulic cutters could remove the lock

“I had a pitchfork in my brain!”

... but I'm alright now, says mega-lucky farm worker

 In a medical miracle up there with the creation of Bert Newton's fake hair, a Russian farmhand is expected to make a full recovery after the prong from a pitchfork speared through his eye to lodge in his brain.

Aleksy Startsev was feeding cows in Armavir when the accident occurred. “I was putting down straw for the cows when the pitchfork got tangled in one of the cow's horns when it shook its head,” he explained. That snapped one of the prongs off and it flew straight into old mate's skull.

“It all happened so fast. I remember being shocked and shouting for help and I tried to open my eye but I couldn't. I thought I'd lost it,” said the 25-year-old.

Miraculously, even though the metal went 10cm into his head, Startsev won't lose vision in his eye because it entered right near his tear duct, missing the eyeball. If you saw him today you wouldn't even know anything had happened.

Well, unless you were eating a meal with him and you started waving your fork around. That'd probably freak him out a bit.

Despite the fork going through the eye socket, he won't lose his sight

FORKING HELL!

Psst... want to fly a car?

The world's most advanced flying ride works beautifully... even when it crashes!

Here's some good news for anyone who wants to buy a flying car: the most advanced vehicle of its type in the world, the AeroMobil 3.0, crashed during a test flight in May.

Why's that good news? Because its ballistic parachute system worked perfectly and nobody was injured, proving that the Slovakian-built engineering tour de force should ace the tough safety tests it needs to pass before it's made available to Joe Public.

The specs on this thing make for amazing reading. It's powered by a four-cylinder engine made for use in planes, which makes enough grunt to sling it through the air at up to 200kmh, or along the ground at up to 160 clicks. Most of it is made from steel framework with carbon coating, making it extremely light and strong, and the craft can fly for 700km or drive for 875km on a single tank.

It's not advisable to try taking off from a suburban cul-de-sac, though; the AeroMobil needs to hit 130kmh over 250m or so before it'll take off.

But once it's up in the air it can change the angle of its folding, insect-like wings, plus it packs advanced avionics, an autopilot, and that life-saving parachute system in case it all goes to hell mid-flight.

The craft's been in development since 1990, and while they've got to be very close to going public with it, there's no word on when it'll be released. You'll need a pilot's licence to fly one, but that's a small price to pay for being able to cruise over peak-hour traffic.

Marty McFly's hoverboard – FOR REAL!

This time, there's no camera trickery involved — but sadly there's still a slight catch

The part of Back to the Future Part II where Marty rides a hoverboard was set in 1915, so it's fitting that Lexus unveiled their amazing take on the technology just a few weeks ago.

The car company announced it to the world in a short video featuring a skateboard made of bamboo and carbon fibre that floats above the ground as it farts out puffs of liquid nitrogen. Yeah, science!

While it looks like it's hovering above concrete, the board's magnetic levitation system couldn't work unless there was something that repels it underneath. And that means that unlike Marty's board, this one will only work in very, very limited areas.

NASA unveils its super-drone

Ten-engine beast won't take you to the moon, but it still kicks serious arse

When it comes to changing flight forever, no-one holds a candle to the super-nerds at NASA. And now the people who faked... sorry, pulled off the moon landing have tried their hand at making drones, with stunning results.

The agency just showed off its GL-10 drone — the GL stands for Greased Lightning and the 10 refers to how many engines it has — and it's so good it just might change unmanned aircraft forever.

Its 3m wingspan holds eight of those power units, with the other two on the tail, letting it take off vertically like a helicopter, but carve through the sky like a plane.

Planet-brained science types are getting extremely excited about where the drone could go from here.

"It could be used for small package delivery or vertical takeoff and landing, long-endurance surveillance for agriculture, mapping and other applications," said NASA aerospace engineer Bill Fredericks.

Or in other words, it can deliver pizzas and watch over your weed crop to make sure no-one's stealing your dope.

And because the whole thing's battery-powered, NASA reckons it's quieter than a petrol-driven lawnmower, which will be great news if your dickhead neighbour buys one and decides to fly it at 7am on a Sunday while you've got a filthy hangover.

ZOO's stand-up comedian heckles life every week

WHY I'M SUFFERING FROM SURVIVOR GUILT

Sorry to get all sombre, but I've had some anxiety issues and overwhelming sense of dread about the future these past few months. If you've had these vibes killing your buzz of late, then I recommend having a psychologist tinker with your squash and giving you a little tune-up. It takes a strong person to ask for help, and it can cost a fair bit for a session, but I've only had two so far and I'm already back on track.

My current issues stem from the fact that I'm single at 35 and society is really putting the pressure on me to find a wife and spawn my own little failure cult. I'm sexually active but the older I get the more I feel the walls closing in. I remember a time when I'd enjoy a guilt-free weekday walk around a Westfield and ogle babes in the food court, but now I'm older I notice women are way more judgmental, like it's 1942 WWII and they're pissed off that I'm not in the trenches. I'm sure my "DILF" T-shirt and pram full of tinnies has a little to do with it, but either way, it's getting tense out there.

All my closest mates from school are married with children and their Facebook feed is this brutal avalanche of family snaps and depressing responsibilities. Mine is a dynamite album of me hangin' with babes after a show, or cruising through the Pacific on a boat! Obviously I cherry pick the photos — there's none of me crying and masturbating in a Wollongong Ibis, which is 85 per cent of my life. But when I see my mates' Facebook feeds or visit them I have this growing sense of anxiety, so I went and saw this psychologist. I explained my scenario and she says, "You have survivor guilt, classic case." I was blown away. I travel around doing stupid accents, waking up at midday and occasionally scoring some V, and I feel so bad that all my close mates are missing out that now I have the same condition as Stuart Diver.

I obviously didn't go through the trauma of a Thredbo landslide like poor Stu did, but that's apparently what marriage is, according to a professional psychologist. She gave me a course of action and I'm feeling much better, especially now I've told you about it all and the $170 sessions are tax deductible...

Eighty per cent of suicides are men, so if you're feeling the psychological pinch speak to your GP and get a referral, 'cos this world's a little like Black Hawk Down and we here at ZOO Weekly have a policy that no man gets left behind.

Sure, there's a bundle of Diablo clones for your phone, but this is one of your best bets. Choose one of four winged fantasy characters: warrior, sorceress, bowman or assassin — and get smashing in a hack-'n-slash adventure in single or multiplayer. That annoying mouse-click sound is no more. Price: Free

LARA CROFT: RELIC RUN

iOS, Android

Run, Lara, run! The hottest ever booty hunter runs through old temples like they're an obstacle course, collecting ancient coins, sliding under ruins, leaping over gaps and blasting away creatures with her guns. The controls are easy and Lara's boobs and arse are priceless.

ANGEL STONE

iOS, Android

The deepest action RPG we've seen for apps features jaw-dropping graphics, slick-looking characters (male or female Berserker, Gunslinger or Shadowmage) and loads of loot for customisation and upgrades. The presentation looks clean and it can be played online across all platforms: iOS, Android and web. Price: Free

GALACTIC PHANTASY PRELUDE

iOS, Android

Trekkies will want the pointy Spock ears for this space exploration RPG, where you can boldly go where no man has gone before. You can even create your own ship and build an entire fleet. It could use more space-blasting action, but it plays like a mini No Man's Sky. Price $1.29 (Price: $7.49)

BEST MOBILE APP GAMES

GODFIRE: RISE OF PROMETHEUS

iOS, Android

Set in a world of Greek Mythology, this epic action-adventure game is just like God of War and feels too big for your phone. Slice through goons and bring down colossal gods and monsters with your twin blades and well-timed screen taps. The controls are tricky but feels bad-ass. Price: $3.79

MARVEL CONTEST OF CHAMPIONS

ZOO's guide to the bloodiest, freakiest and meltiest movies
in history!

GOREFEST!

CANNIBAL HOLOCAUST

Four American filmmakers go to the Amazon, where they're torn to pieces and eaten by tribal people. Shot low-budget, Cannibal Holocaust is a fake found-footage documentary that looked so real it was banned in over 50 countries. Scenes include decapitation, cannibalism, full-frontal castration and bodies that have been staked from the vagina through to the mouth. It was all so realistic that the director, Ruggero Deodato, only beat murder charges by producing his cast alive in court and revealing the secret to the impalement scene.

STREET TRASH

In this 1987 flick, American alcoholics are subjected to a drink that's even more lethal than Foster's. See, Viper comes in a hip-flask bottle and offers hobos release from their problems — because, after a gulp, they start to dissolve into green and blue goo. The best scene has a dude taking a swig on a toilet in an abandoned building and flushing his melting self.

DEAD ALIVE

Before he made endless epics about hairy-toed Hobbits, Peter Jackson was a hardcore gore-master. His 1992 Dead Alive zombie comedy is one of the bloodiest films made, outdoing itself in an extended climax in which the hero announces "Party's over!" before taking to dozens of the undead with a lawnmower. For five minutes, faces are mown, hands and feet fly, and eyeballs explode. A discarded head is even kicked around like a football before being liquefied in a blender. Tasty!

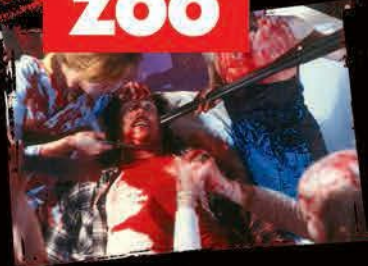

HOSTEL

Eli Roth's movie is about annoying tourists being tortured and killed — so, basically, your average fantasy about what you'd do to backpackers given half the chance. Hostel was successful enough to inspire two equally horrible sequels. Binge-watch the trilogy for scenes including finger-chopping and toilet-drowning, chainsaw-maiming, decapitated head soccer, cut-off-dick fed to guard dog and Achilles' tendon slashing.

SCANNERS

Exploding heads aren't uncommon on screens these days. But in the wake of Tom Savini's work in 1978's Dawn of the Dead, make-up maestro Dick Smith went one better in 1981's Scanners. In this classic, which is about duelling telekinetic freaks, we see the excellent extent of villain Michael Ironside's evil when he demonstrates his powers by making a dude's head explode in a cloud of blood and brains.

MANIAC

This 1980 slasher flick has Joe Spinelli playing a psycho who stalks and scalps women in New York. But the craziest moment comes when our nutjob jumps onto a car bonnet and shotguns a dude inside — with a slow-motion shower of blood and brains. This exploitation horror was remade in 2012 with baby-faced Hobbit Elijah Wood in the lead role.

THE PASSION OF THE CHRIST

Moral outrage at torture porn often comes from Christians, which is pretty funny given their religion invented the genre. Director Mel Gibson depicted Jesus's final 12 hours in excruciating detail in his 2004 epic. He's beaten, whipped, flayed and nails driven through his wrists before he's strung on a cross and left to die slowly.

BLOOD FEAST

In the 1960s, US porno filmmaker Herschell Gordon Lewis hit on the gimmick of "splatter" movies. His first and most notorious was 1963's Blood Feast, about a mad Egyptian caterer who kills women in Florida so he can eat bits of them in weirdo rites. The grossest scene has cops discovering a chick drenched in red, circled by offal and served with a side salad between her legs (seriously).

ICHI THE KILLER

The most notorious work of deranged Japanese director Takashi Miike, about yakuza gangs, is a violence-a-palooza: rooms carpeted with entrails, sliced-off faces sliding down walls, necks pierced with needles, clamped nipples stretched and razored off, faces spiked from a dozen different angles, feet cut off at the shin and arteries spurting like fountains.

THE THING

John Carpenter's sci-fi horror about a shape-shifting alien in the Antarctic holds up beautifully, thanks to Rob Bottin's incredible effects. In one scene, a man tries to revive his collapsed mate with defibrillation pads, only for the victim's chest to cave in and sprout jaws that bite off his arms, then erupting an alien thing.

DJANGO UNCHAINED

Gore-lover Quentin Tarantino really unleashed the red stuff in this revenge drama, which climaxes with Jamie Foxx shooting up a small army's worth of racist minions. Highlights include our hero hiding behind a body slowly being reduced to nothing by rifle fire.

GOREFEST!

IRREVERSIBLE

This French arthouse film about a brutal rape and revenge killing unfolds in reverse chronological order: we first see the victim's boyfriend bashing the rapist with a fire hydrant. The frenzied attack soon ruins the man's skull — squashed, caved in, totally destroyed. It's possibly the most realistic and disturbing murder scene ever committed to film.

MARTYRS

Like Irreversible, this 2008 shocker was part of the "New French Extremism" and harder to watch. It's about a secret society that tries to discover the secrets of existence by creating "martyrs" via the torture murders of young women. Our heroine Anna falls into the clutches of these maniacs, who starve, beat, torture and slash her before flaying and crucifying her.

OLDBOY

Forget the lame US remake and head to the 2003 South Korean original for toe-curling gore. Not only does this revenge flick offer the lovely spectacle of a man eating a live octopus, it boasts our hairy hero taking a guy's teeth out... with a claw hammer. To be fair, when he realises the error of his ways he's no less brutal with himself, cutting his own tongue out to apologise.

THE DEAD TRILOGY

If you love zombies, you can thank George A. Romero. In 1968's Night of the Living Dead he invented the concept of undead who are compelled to eat flesh and who can only be stopped if they're shot in the head or decapitated. While this low-budget flick was filmed in black and white, it's still stomach-churning today. Ten years on, Romero could afford colour when he made his sequel, Dawn of the Dead, and he employed Tom Savini, a make-up artist who'd seen real horrors in Vietnam. The resulting movie about people holing up in a mall besieged by zombies is a gore classic: heads are exploded by gunshots and, most memorably, a zombie's cranium is lopped off by a helicopter blade. But Romero and Savini outdid themselves with 1985's Day of the Dead in which zombies outnumber humans 400,000 to one. The sickening highlights include a reanimated corpse literally spilling his guts and the villainous Captain Rhodes being pulled to pieces and eaten as he croaks: "Choke on it!"

BLOODSUCKING FREAKS

This notorious 1976 cult flick has Master Sardu and dwarf sidekick Ralphus running a stage show with fake torture and murder. But he's killing people for real! Endless gore, including someone's brains being sucked out in a straw.

SAVING PRIVATE RYAN

While it's not gratuitous, the D-Day beach-landing scene that opens Steven Spielberg's historical epic contains several jaw-dropping gore moments, not least when Tom Hanks's heroic captain tries to drag a wounded GI to safety only to turn around and see a mortar explosion has left him hauling half a corpse.

GOREFEST!

FLESH FOR FRANKENSTEIN

White-haired art weirdo Andy Warhol produced this 1973 freaky fright flick Flesh for Frankenstein, with awesomely OTT German actor Udo Kier as the mad scientist who believes "to know death... you have to fk life... in the gall bladder". The doc gets his just desserts when his hand is cut off and he's impaled with a metal pipe, his gizzards presented like a bloody kebab — all in 3D!

ANTHROPOPHAGUS

You've heard of new-age nitwits saving their babies' placentas and cooking them up as some sort of nourishing feast? Well, the hairy-mutt villain of this 1980 shocker goes a wee bit further. After choking a pregnant woman to death, Klaus Wortmann plucks the foetus from her womb and eats it.

RAMBO

By the time of 2008's fourth film, CGI meant director Sylvester Stallone could brutalise bodies with a bloody abandon. In the finale, his warrior chops off a Burmese soldier's head and then unleashes hell with a machine gun, turning what seems like a million minions into mincemeat. Rambo reverts to his old standby knife to disembowel the big baddie — with digital blood!

HELLBOUND HELLRAISER II

A dude's stretched out on a mattress that's a gateway to Hell and proceeds to slice his body to ribbons, unleashing blood, organs and maggots within while screaming "Get 'em off me!". But all that does is summon up a bloody demon to tear and gnaw at him. Yeah, we've had hangovers like that.

THE BURNING

In this 1980 flick, the maniac uses garden shears to stab, slash and hack camp co-eds to bits. If you're squeamish, best give this one a miss. Otherwise, you can see a three-minute supercut of all its flesh-piercing, artery-severing glory on YouTube, scored first to Fatboy Slim's The Weekend Starts Here.

TV TRAUMA!

The small screen's as bloody as the big screen these days...

MASTERS OF HORROR: This series didn't pull any punches, but Takashi Miike's Imprint episode overstepped the mark with its idea of facial piercing. Never broadcast, it's only on DVD.

THE KNICK: Starring Clive Owen, this hospital drama set in early 20th Century New York features scene after scene of stomach-churning surgery. Perfect dinnertime viewing!

ALIEN

In the 1979 classic, a group of "space truckers" are terrorised by a giant xenomorph with razor teeth, knife claws, a whiplash tail and corrosive acid for blood. While watching it stalking the crew is shit-scary, the best bloody moment is when the baby alien is "born" by erupting from inside a character. Most of the cast didn't know what was going to happen, so their expressions of horror are real!

THE NEW YORK RIPPER

No gore list is complete without Lucio Fulci, the Italian maniac who's the Michelangelo of splatter. In 1981's The Beyond, there's an exploding head and dog-ripped throat. But they don't quite have the same scrote-shrivelling power as the razor blade slicing through the eyeball in this 1982 movie.

RE-ANIMATOR

The most memorable scene of this 1985 horror-comedy has an evil decapitated head-in-a-pan using the hands of his headless body to grope a poor nekkid girl played on a surgical table. Even worse: he has his noggin lowered into her groin for some corpse-ilingus.

THE WALKING DEAD:

Bullets, knives, screwdrivers, crossbows, cars: the ragged survivors of this zombie hit use everything every week to smash, slash, smear and splatter the undead hordes. It's as gory as.

DEXTER: For seven seasons our serial killer offed worse bad guys with his trusty knives and thoughtful plastic-wrap clean-up kit. Grosses bit: he had a kinda-boner for his sister.

A YOUNG DOCTOR'S NOTEBOOK: Daniel 'Harry Potter' Radcliffe plays a young Russian medico sent to a village 100 years ago. The leg amputation scene seems to go on forever.

UK TV star Poppy Farnan isn't short of a buck, but she is short several items of clothing

ZOO

It's almost unbelievable that Poppy Farnan has just appeared on the Pommy TV show Love Island in order to find a bloke. As a beautiful blonde with a body Jennifer Lawrence would kill for and no shortage of money, you'd think the queue of men wanting to ask her out would be longer than the West Australian border.

But appear she did — and even more amazingly, she got eliminated after five weeks of the show, which is what we imagine Farmer Wants a Wife would be like if no farmers were involved, it was set on an island in the Mediterranean, and everyone had an annoying English accent and was pissed half the time. OK, make that 80 per cent of the time.

"I'm blonde, skinny and attractive," Poppy said on the show's website.

"I think I'll be all the male contestants' types."

All of which is obviously true, but she forgot to say "wealthy". Not only does the stunner from Cheshire come from a rich family, she's also something of a successful businesswoman. The 22-year-old owns the online boutique lovepoppy.com, where you can buy clothing she has personally selected. ZOO had a look and was disappointed to discover there aren't any "Harden the fk up" T-shirts or footy socks on offer.

Come on, Poppy. Lift your game...

Sport

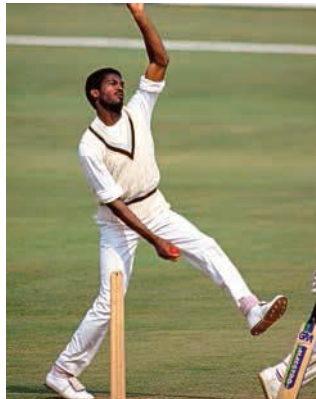

Sport's best nicknames!

Some are funny, some are cruel as hell, but they're all mightily inventive...

THE ACCOUNTANT

› Kangaroos captain Cameron Smith doesn't have the body of a super-fit, super-strong NRL player. He looks like he works at a desk.

WHISPERING DEATH

› Windies legend Michael Holding's run-up was smooth as silk and quiet. Then he'd unleash a thunderbolt that would split a helmet in two.

THE SHERMINATOR

› Shane Warne hung this on Ian Bell during an Ashes series, referencing the dickhead from American Pie. It stuck and Bell had a shocker.

PETROL 70 CENTS A LITRE

› Petero Civoniceva's surname wasn't easy for his teammates to pronounce when he first started in the NRL, so they got around that by coming up with this bit of gold.

CHURCHY

› Adam Gilchrist? Churchy? It's not a religion thing. A kid once asked him if he was "Eric Gilchurch" in front of Steve Waugh and something that funny just has to stick.

WALTZING

› Cronulla, Gold Coast and Newcastle forward Matt Hilder had possibly the best nickname in the NRL from 2003 to 2013.

THE BURNING MAP

› Penrith NRL great John Cartwright was the spitting image of Hoss from the TV show Bonanza. But Hoss was too simple, so he was named after the burning map from the show's opening credits.

CHARIOTS

› Not only does this work incredibly well with English winger Martin Offiah's name, it also describes his play beautifully. The man was lightning on the field.

OSWALD

› Brett Lee's usually known as "Bing". But for a while he batted behind Shane Lee and Ian Harvey in the Aussie one-day side. Think JFK assassination and you'll get it.

THE BRICK WITH EYES

› Have a look at this pic of former prop, Senator Glenn Lazarus. No further explanation is needed.

ANTHEMS

› Chris Whitaker got this for endlessly backing up George Gregan in the Wallabies side. He didn't play much, but he got to line up for the pre-game anthem a hell of a lot.

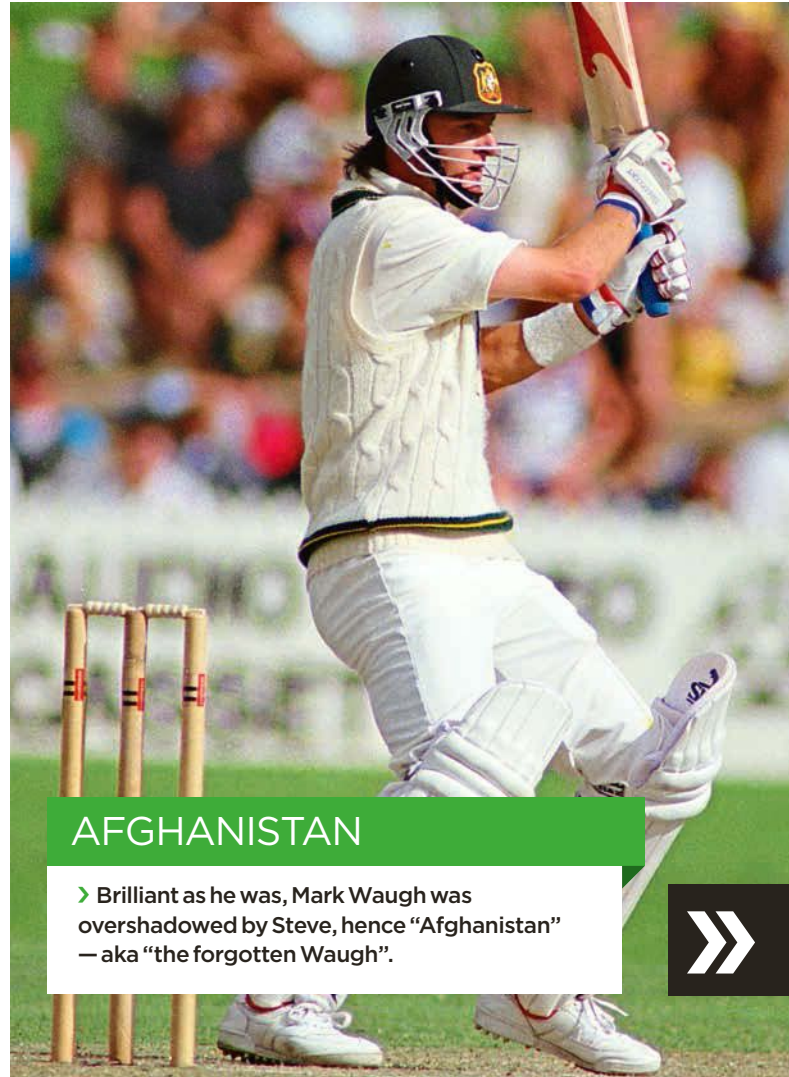

THE WARDROBE

› Former Fulham defender Papa Bouba Diop was a big lad for a soccer player at 195cm. Strong bloke, too. Or in other words, he was a large piece of furniture.

ONE SIZE

› Oldham supporters created one of the truly great handles in sporting history when they gave this to Fitz Hall while he played for the club. He should have his name changed to it by deed poll.

AFGHANISTAN

› Brilliant as he was, Mark Waugh was overshadowed by Steve, hence "Afghanistan" — aka "the forgotten Waugh".

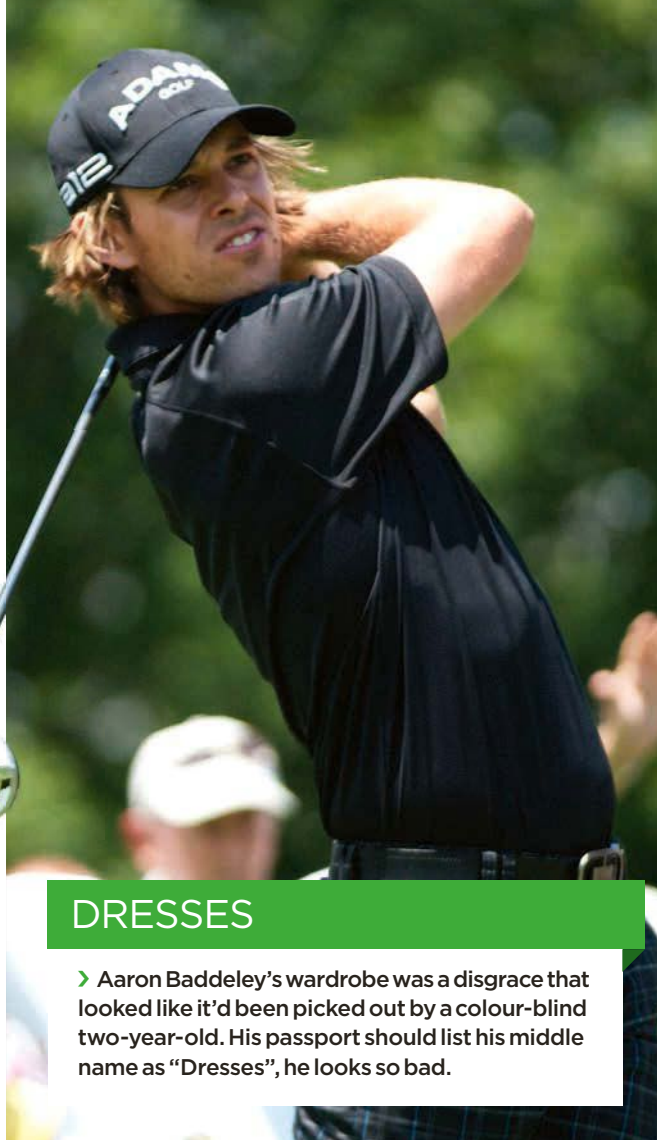

FIGJAM

➤ Collingwood boss Nathan Buckley was never short on self-confidence as a player or coach, hence the fact he's known as Fk I'm Good Just Ask Me to his mates.

TIP RAT

➤ St Kilda's Stephen Milne doesn't have the prettiest handle, but it suits. Look up "Stephen Milne Tip Rat" on YouTube and you'll find one of the best bits of commentary ever.

DRESSES

➤ Aaron Baddeley's wardrobe was a disgrace that looked like it'd been picked out by a colour-blind two-year-old. His passport should list his middle name as "Dresses", he looks so bad.

JUFE

➤ Royce Hart's nickname works a lot better if you use it as his middle name and pronounce the whole thing like you're asking a question.

MASTER

➤ The Demons didn't win a premiership when forward Matthew Bate played 102 games for the club, but they deserve a trophy for this effort. Bravo!

SECOND TO

➤ Former world middleweight and super middleweight champ Michael Nunn lived up to this one by being a killer blend of style, speed and power.

WHATSAPACKETA

➤ Doesn't make any sense, does it? Until you make it the middle name of former NSW and Kangaroos rugby league rep Phil Sigsworth. Then it becomes one of the best monikers ever.

BUNNINGS

➤ If the hardware giant hasn't already approached former Brisbane Lions midfielder Troy Selwood about doing ads for them, they bloody well should.

STIFFY

➤ It's hard to imagine former Adelaide Crow Graham Johncock being very happy about hearing his nickname called out in the locker room. Still, at least it's better than being called "Floppy".

THE INCREDIBLE SULK

➤ Pommy soccer fans are masters at creating nicknames, and Nicolas Anelka got this for being a whingeing sook in the Premier League.

SPITZ

► If you can't figure out why his teammates at North Melbourne hung this on Andrew Swallow, you really need to get out more. And perhaps read up on oral sex a bit.

DUNCAN DISORDERLY

► Noted wild man and Glasgow Rangers/Everton hard case Duncan Ferguson lived up to this one when he was jailed for headbutting a man, among many other run-ins with the cops including assault convictions.

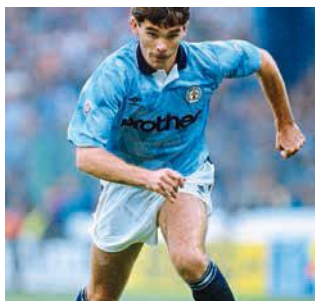

VILLAGE

► Former England star Jonathan Woodgate wasn't the sharpest tool in the shed. Matter of fact, he was dumb as a box of hammers, so he got this lumped on him. It's short for "Village Idiot".

INSPECTOR GADGET

► Dustin Fletcher has long arms. Make that bloody long arms. We doubt he says, "Go, go Gadget arms!" every time he goes up to take a grab, but.

DISSA

► Neil Pointon was reliable, but he wasn't exactly Pele when he played for Manchester City and Everton. Hint: Use "Dissa" as his middle name and say it out loud.

CINDY

► During his long career with the Hawks, Shane Crawford was regarded as one of the better-looking blokes in the AFL. He might've been called Cindy but he didn't play like a girl.

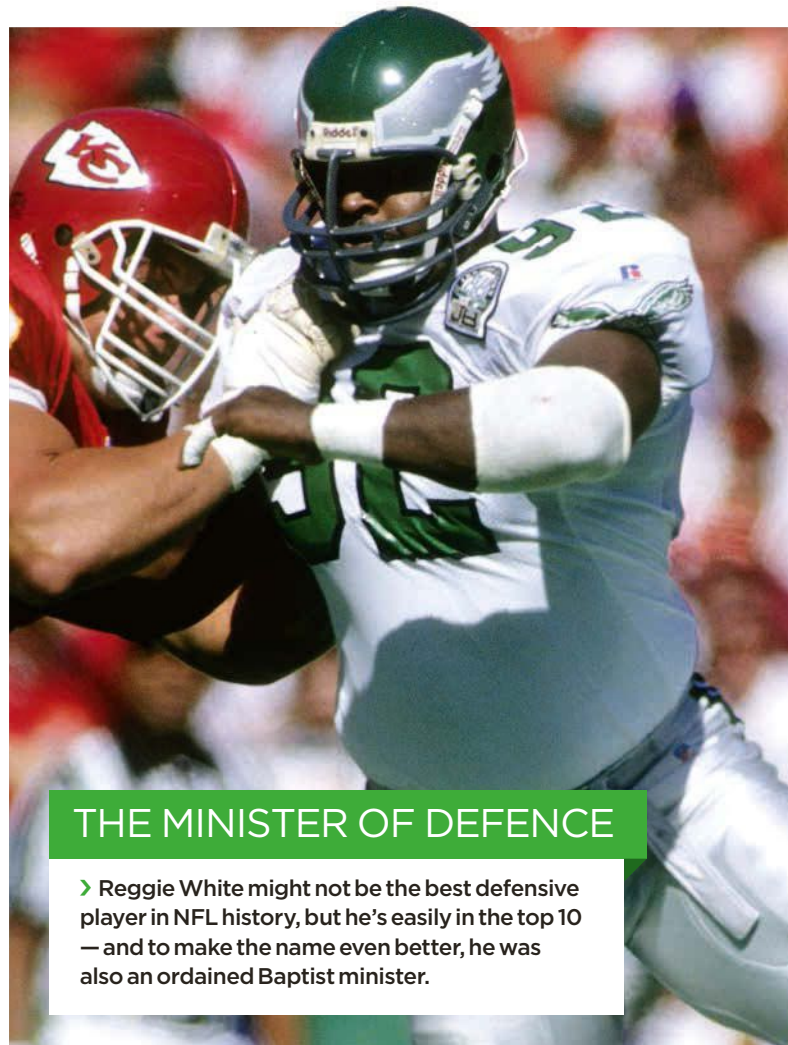

THE EAGLE

► Eddie Edwards was about as good at ski jumping as Santo Cilauro is at MMA, so why not name him after one of the deadliest and fastest flying animals?

MRS DOUBTFIRE

► Pro golfer Colin Montgomerie is a big fat bastard. Sorry, big, fat Scottish bastard. Get drunk and squint a bit and he looks like Robin Williams in drag. Kinda.

THE MINISTER OF DEFENCE

► Reggie White might not be the best defensive player in NFL history, but he's easily in the top 10 — and to make the name even better, he was also an ordained Baptist minister.

SPY ACTION

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE — ROGUE NATION [M]

THE GIST: The IMF agency (not to be confused with the IVF agency) is facing the axe when it comes up against its biggest threat yet from the Syndicate, a kinda anti-IMF supposedly mythical organisation of assassins and rogue operatives. Ethan Hunt (Tom Cruise) assembles his team — including Simon Pegg, Jeremy Renner, Ving Rhames and token Swedish hottie Rebecca Ferguson — to prove the Syndicate's existence and bring them down.

ZOO PREDICTS: The stunts look sick — particularly the one with Cruise hanging off the plane — and the villain is played by the always evil Sean Harris (the junkie from Harry Brown), so this should be a crowd pleaser.

BLU-RAY

WESTERN

SLOW WEST [M]

THE GIST: It's the end of the nineteenth century — just before dick pics and selfie sticks were invented — when young Jay (Kodi Smit-McPhee) heads west across the US frontier from Scotland in search of his lost love. He is joined by a mysterious traveller (Michael Fassbender) and pursued by a bad-ass outlaw (Ben Mendelsohn). ZOO SAYS: An underrated slow-burner featuring an A-list cast.

RUN ALL NIGHT [MA15+]

THE GIST: Jimmy (Liam Neeson) is a hitman who kills the son of his friend and boss (Ed Harris) to save the life of his own estranged son (Joel Kinnaman). The two friends quickly become foes and Jimmy must go on a one-night rampage to protect his son.

ZOO SAYS: This is just Taken, only instead of saving his wife and daughter, Neeson has to save his son (who said Hollywood is out of fresh ideas?). That said, this is one of the better copies, thanks to some tight action and the addition of Harris.

Mind the gap

7/10

ROM-COM

TOP FIVE [MA15+]

THE GIST: Andre Allen (Chris Rock) is a comedian trying to do a serious film. On the promo trail, he's frustrated by the media's fixation on his Hammy the Bear character and pending wedding to a reality star. But then he hits it off with a journo (Rosario Dawson), who helps put his life into perspective. ZOO SAYS: The scene with the hookers in the hotel is nut-bustingly funny, but it's a bit talky and slow.

SHOOTER

CALL OF DUTY: ADVANCED WARFARE
EXO ZOMBIES

PS4, XBI, PC

6/10

THE GIST: Zombie warfare was once a gimmick for the first-person military shooter, but now it's a thing. This co-op mode comes with a new map for every DLC pack purchased and features an all-star cast of film celebrities trying to survive waves of zombies, earning credits to spend at cash dispensers for health, ammo and weapons. ZOO SAYS: It's thin. What could have been a great survival shooter is condensed into a brief cutscene and repetitive shooting rounds confined to compact arenas. Blink and you'll miss the incredible cast talent, who are lost on first-person view. Some depth and scares are needed, but it's a rock-solid shooter.

ADVENTURE

KING'S QUEST: A KNIGHT TO REMEMBER

XBI, PS4, XB360, PS3, PC

7/10

THE GIST: Many have tried to remake the retro, point-and-click animated PC adventures, but only now has it seen the light of day. Released in chapters, the knightly tale follows the story of a young Graham before he became King.

ZOO SAYS: If you've ever seen How to Train Your Dragon, this has the same vibe. It has a good tempo, a few light chuckles and a story to keep you glued — but leave it for your young bro while you sit back and watch.

ACTION

GOD OF WAR III:
REMASTERED

PS4

8/10

THE GIST: The mighty Kratos defies mythology as we know it, tearing down Mount Olympus and its mighty god in a quest for vengeance. This stupendously epic action game from PS3 has been beefed up to HD, further enhancing the nonstop dynamic camera angles and dramatic music.

ZOO SAYS: Despite overloading this sequel with more "OMG" moments, it was probably the weakest of the three. But it does come with a foursome scene.

ALT ROCK

GATHERER

HEAVY HAIL

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Like their famous neighbours Shihad, this Kiwi four-piece left Wellington years ago to base themselves in Oz (we're assuming to focus more on their music — there aren't as many sheep to distract them in Melbourne). Their second album is an interesting mix of pop, rock and electro elements.

Similarities can be drawn between Shihad in the vocal and riff department, but this is way proggy and more synth heavy. ZOO SAYS: Yet another local band who deserve as much attention as any international big-name act.

INDIE ROCK

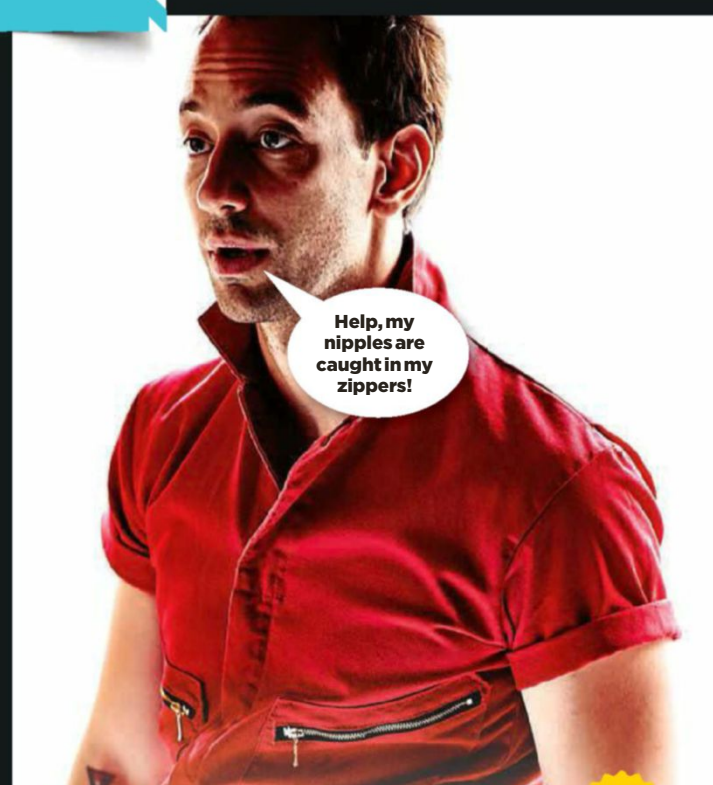

THE MACCABEES

MARKS TO PROVE IT

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Despite their rather chirpy-sounding moniker, this London five-piece create music that's as gloomy and drab as their homeland's weather. That's not to say it's shit, though. Unlike their national cricket team, the band are actually extremely competent and masters of their craft. The intelligent lyrics, emotive music and skilful execution brings to mind bands like The National, Death Cab For Cutie and Editors. ZOO SAYS: Not a dud track on here. Perfect for those of you who like introspective, downer indie rock.

Help, my nipples are caught in my zippers!

INDIE ROCK

ALBERT HAMMOND JR

MOMENTARY MASTERS

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: After dealing with the fallout from his chaotic tenure as guitarist for The Strokes, Albert Hammond Jr has emerged from rehab sober and full of creativity if his third album and first since 2008 is anything to go by. It's full of hooky, jangly guitar riffs that'd standout on a Strokes album, or even one by the Arctic Monkeys. He's a strong vocalist, too, singing confidently over upbeat rockers like Born Slippy. Caught By My Shadow and the awesomely titled Side Boob. ZOO SAYS: If you're sick of waiting for The Strokes to get their shit together for another album, this will tide you over.

FIDDY BANKRUPT!

Curtis "50 Cent" Jackson is living up to his nickname. But is he really that broke?

1 In May, Forbes mag placed Fiddy fourth on the list of the wealthiest hip-hop artists, with an estimated worth of $210m from music, beverage, tech and clothing businesses

2 Two months later, he filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy, which means he's not totally broke, but needs a plan to reorganise his finances to pay creditors over time. It doesn't require him to sell all assets

3 Fiddy hasn't exactly been penny-pinching in the past — he bought a 19-bedroom, 37-bathroom mansion from Mike Tyson's ex-wife in 2003. He sued an engineering firm for underestimating the amount he'd have to spend on it — US$6m instead of US$500k. That case settled in 2009

4 About half of Fiddy's wealth is thought to have come from his 2007 sale of Vitamin Water to Coca-Cola

5 But he lost a US$17m lawsuit in 2014 over claims he'd nicked the idea for headphones from a company who asked him to market them

6 The bankruptcy filing comes days after Fiddy's lawsuit loss to Lavonia Leviston — he leaked a sex tape of her with rap rival Rick Ross in 2009, and hosted a 13-minute clip of it online as bitchy, wig-wearing narrator Pimpin' Curly

7 The jury ordered Fiddy to pay Leviston US$7m in compensatory damages, and maybe more in punitive damages — if he can afford it...

ZOO confessions!

The girls of ZOO Singles leave their inhibitions at the computer screen and reveal all about their raunchy online dating experiences...

CARLY, 26

"I broke up with my long-term fella and realised I wanted something different: just fun... just sex! After signing up to ZOO Singles I had access to hundreds of guys minutes from where I live. At first I was quite shy, but after a few days I'd had amazing sex! With a new guy to please whenever I feel like it, I've never felt so satisfied!"

DESIREE, 43

"I find men my age cannot keep up with my highly active sex drive, so I prefer the effort put in by a horny 20-something. One guy wanted me so badly he would contact me in the middle of the night to meet up! It turned me on so much knowing how badly he wanted sex. I guess there's a certain appeal to a woman with experience in the bedroom."

TARA, 21

"I work nights in a hotel and my sex life suffers, so I signed up to ZOO Singles. I wanted one guy right away so I suggested he pay me a visit at work. I checked him into a room and after a few minutes I got a very sexy room service request. With customer service a priority, I put a 'Do Not Disturb' sign on the door, and then he began to rip off my clothes!"
